Working from Home

With panic over coronavirus at fever pitch, many workers may also be ordered to stay away from the office and do day-to-day tasks from the comfort of their home. However, the reality is, a growing army of workers have already gone 'flexi'. That is, they work part of the week in an office and part at home already - pandemic or not.

While technology allows us to stay connected, we also understand that providing you with the right furniture to make working from home easy and safe is equally as important, and we have plenty of home office furniture solutions available to create an inspiring area to work with sleek office desks, comfortable seating and clever storage solutions.

Those sorts of investments have prompted many to wonder if companies that embrace remote working in a crisis may find it sticks around as normality returns. It is harder to say no to employee requests for working from home if they already have the home office furniture in place. And it's easier to view the investment as a sensible one if it pays off for years, rather than months, to come.
